

Every morning,
Tessa and Zachary walked to school, and every afternoon they walked home again.

This illustration shows two children walking home from school. The boy on the left, Zachary, is wearing a green and white plaid jumper over a white shirt and has a backpack. The girl on the right, Tessa, is wearing a white shirt with a green geometric patterned skirt and is holding a small white bottle. They are walking under a large tree with green leaves, and a bright sun is visible in the dark brown sky.

If it was hot, they walked in the shade.
If it was cold, they put on a jumper.
If it was just right, they smiled and said AHHHHHHH!
And every day they looked for ten tiny things.

This illustration shows the same two children walking home from school in winter. They are now wearing winter hats and jumpers. The boy is wearing a green and white plaid jumper, and the girl is wearing a white shirt with a green geometric patterned skirt. They are walking in the snow, and the sky is dark brown with white snowflakes. In the background, there are bare trees and a large, stylized, geometric mountain range.

What an excellent walk.
It was slow and simple and splendiferous.

They saw fabulous fish and feathers.

They saw surprising stones and shells.

They saw beautiful birds and baubles.

Every morning, they rode to school in their shiny machine ...

... and every afternoon they rode home again.

If it was hot, they turned on the cooling.

If it was cold, they turned on the heating.

If it was just right,
they sat back and said AHHHHHHH!

What an excellent machine.

It was smooth and swift and splendiferous.