

HOW TO DO IT IN THE GARDEN by SABRINA HAHN

ABOUT THE BOOK

Channelling over three decades of knowledge as a horticultural and garden design expert, Sabrina Hahn knows how to get Australians doing it in the garden when it comes to creating and maintaining your green space.

From getting down and dirty preparing your soil to growing organic edibles (like nuts, herbs, fruit and veg), ornamentals and native plants to learning how to handle bugs and other pests, you'll discover just how seductive nature can be.

Focusing on sustainability, biodiversity and managing the effects of climate change, Sabrina's cheeky humour, endless inspiration and practical problem-solving will entice you to get things growing.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Sabrina Hahn is a master gardener, horticultural professional, award-winning radio presenter, podcaster and writer. She has a passion for creating sustainable landscapes that make cities more liveable, and she aims to educate others on the importance of creating biodiversity in their own backyards. In 2014, she was nominated for Australian of the Year for her services to the horticultural industry.

NOTES

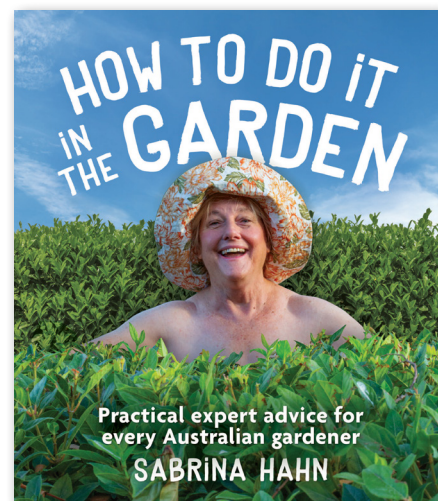

- Sabrina has been sharing her knowledge for nearly 30 years on ABC Radio, as well as writing a weekly gardening column for the West Australian and contributing to Gardening Australia and Organic Gardener.
- This is the perfect gift for novice and intermediate gardeners – or anyone interested in starting, updating or maintaining their own patch of green space. Sabrina's cheeky and unorthodox style will inspire gardeners of every ability to get their hands dirty.
- It is targeted to Australian gardens in every climate.
